RESERVE OFFICER TRAINING CORPS

PATH TO SUCCESS

The Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC) is much more than a program; it's a quest for challenges and achievements that sets you on a path for success in the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Space Force as well as in your lifetime endeavors. AFROTC prepares you to become an officer, leader and a mentor to others while earning a college degree.

SCHOLARSHIPS

We offer scholarships that pay most tuition, books and lab costs at more than 1,100 colleges and universities, including some of the most prestigious institutions in the country.

If you're still in high school, you can apply for the four-year scholarship. If you're already in college, you can join AFROTC and compete for a scholarship that will help you complete your bachelor's degree.

You can join AFROTC even if you're not on scholarship. As a cadet, you'll receive a tax-free monthly stipend during your junior and senior years. The money is used to help offset living expenses.

You are not required to sign a commitment of service obligation for active duty until your junior year, unless you are on scholarship. This allows you to try out AFROTC during your freshman and sophomore years to see if it's right for you.

COLLEGE LIFE

Your college life is similar to that of other students. You'll attend the same classes and participate in the same college activities. The difference is in the elective courses that you take and the physical training that's required of all cadets. At some schools, your AFROTC courses may even translate into a minor in aerospace studies.

Freshmen and sophomore cadets attend AFROTC classes three hours each week, while juniors and seniors attend five hours. Everyone attends weekly leadership labs and physical training sessions; the only times uniforms are worn.

In between your studies and AFROTC activities, you can hang out with your friends, join a sorority or fraternity, play intramural sports or participate in a number of college-sponsored events.

During summer breaks, you can learn a foreign language, learn to fly a glider, go parachuting, tour an Air Force and Space Force base or attend a space mission orientation. These are just a few of the many AFROTC opportunities that will help enhance your college experience and journey to a career as an officer.

ENLISTED COMMISSIONING PROGRAMS

If you're an Air Force or Space Force enlisted member serving on Active Duty, you can apply for an AFROTC Scholarship through the Airman Scholarship and Commissioning Program (ASCP) or the Scholarship for Outstanding Airmen (SOAR). You can also apply for the Professional Officer Course Early Release Program (POC ERP).

All programs allow you to be released from active duty to earn your bachelor's degree and officer's commission. Contact your base career assistance advisor and education services office for complete information on these programs.

AFROTC PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

- Meet academic standards
- Meet Air Force weight and fitness standards
- Pass a Department of Defense Medical Examination Review Board medical exam

JOBS IN DEMAND

AFROTC cadets earning technical and science degrees fill the Air Force's and Space Force's greatest needs. Therefore, they are among the most sought after degrees.

Most cadets have a four-year active-duty service commitment after graduation. However, pilots have a 10-year active-duty service commitment. Both Combat Systems Officers and Air Battle Managers have a six-year service commitment. Nursing degree graduates serve four years in the Air Force Nurse Corps after completing their licensing requirements.

CAREER POSSIBILITIES

While others may struggle in the civilian job market after graduation, through AFROTC you can have a career waiting for you in professions such as:

AEROSPACE ENGINEER	ELECTRICAL ENGINEER
AIRCRAFT MAINTENANCE	FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT
AIR BATTLE MANAGER	INTELLIGENCE
ASTRONAUTICAL ENGINEER	NURSE
COMBAT SYSTEMS OFFICER	PILOT
COMPUTER ENGINEER	PUBLIC AFFAIRS
CONTRACTING	SPACE OPERATIONS
CYBERSPACE OPERATIONS	WEATHER

(Your local AFROTC detachment can provide you with a complete list of officer career opportunities.)
